INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY

Information Technology has raised a host of new and complicated legal issues. It requires a strong foundation in Intellectual Property and Regulatory Law to unravel these complexities. At King Stubb & Kasiva, we have a broad understanding of the issues that involves the internet, cyber security, data privacy, encryption and other related matters. The Firm's lawyers are experienced in bringing together law, technology, and business to address clients' needs. Moreover, when litigation is necessary, we offer unsurpassed capabilities.

Whilst delivering solutions, the Information Technology Practice Group lawyers draw upon expertise from firm attorneys who practice in corporate and transactional matters, intellectual property, litigation, tax, and regulatory matters. This collaborative approach enables us to provide practical, value-added counsel to our clients.
